APC Receives ISO9001: 2000 Certification With A Perfect Score

Alliance of Professionals & Consultants, Inc.(APC) a professional services and staffing company, announced today that it has achieved the prestigious ISO 9001:2000 quality certification at the company headquarters in Raleigh, North Carolina. This was APC's first application, and is proud to complete the initial certification process with zero non-conformances.

"APC is delighted to achieve ISO 9001:2000 certification, especially on our first attempt. This significant achievement reaffirms our commitment to quality and commitment to our clients." says Roy Roberts, President and CEO. "Our clients chose APC because they want a quality solution from a firm committed to continual improvement of client satisfaction. This can only be achieved through a continual improvement of our total Quality Management System. This certification validates the quality work and commitment that our professionals devote to everything they do."

ISO 9000 has become an international reference for quality requirements in business-to-business dealings. With this registration, APC becomes a member of an elite few professional services firms certified to the ISO 9001:2000 standard for quality systems. ISO 9001:2000 certification confirms that APC complies with a defined level of quality in business activities that include documentation, recruiting, quality service processes, and client satisfaction.
